To Stop a Persistent, Hacking Cough

The best remedy in the world for a persistent cough is Pine's. It is a simple, natural, and effective remedy.

Thousands of people normally healthy in every other respect, are annoyed by a persistent hacking cough that comes on after years, disturbing their sleep and making life disagreeable. It's so needless there's an old home-made remedy that will end such a cough easily and quickly.

Get from any druggist "2½ ounces of Pine's" (50 cents worth), pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Begin taking it at once. Gradually but surely, you will notice the phlegm thin out and then disappear altogether, thus ending a cough that you never thought would end. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary throat or chest cold, and for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough and bronchial asthma there is nothing better. It tastes pleasant and keeps perfectly.

Pine's is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and is used by millions of people every year for throat and chest colds with splendid results. To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pine's" with full directions and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded goes with this preparation. The Pine's Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.—Advt.

GAY LADY OCTOPUS OF MOVIES BALKY AS A HUMAN STAR

Christened Lizzie After Attacks of Temperament, Williamson Suit Brings Out.

Lizzie, the beautiful young octopus who has been dragging her thirty-five feet around the United States District Court before Judge Manton and a jury for about a week as the star feature of the suit brought by J. Ernest Williamson against the Universal Film Company, got another bawling out to-day. Williamson, a submarine photographer, whose business is never postponed because of wet grounds, is suing the film company for additional compensation for his work in connection with the production of "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea."

The gender of the octopus which was constructed by Mr. Williamson, was disclosed to-day by one of those interested in the suit. This person said the devil fish was christened Lizzie because it cost so much to get her ready for her part, and because she proved so temperamental at different times.

Just as a scene was all set and the photographers were ready to shoot, the octopus would refuse to act, causing the divers who were working her dead-ly tentacles from the inside to utter language that would never be passed by the board of censors.

That many of Lizzie's admirers were in doubt as to whether she was on the level, was admitted by James J. Lodge, a witness for Williamson, who looked after the production when it was shown in the Broadway Theatre. Mr. Lodge had testified that Williamson's services were worth $500 a week. The Universal Film Company had contracted to pay him $100 a week for eight weeks' work, but as the picture was over six months in the making, Williamson contends that he should receive a little more of the gate receipts. A large part of to-day's evidence had to do with whether Williamson actually went under water during the production. The argument lasted so long that some of the jurors submerged inside their collars and went to sleep. The film company maintained that the octopus and the other props constructed by Williamson were not sufficiently convincing.

"How many persons in the audience asked you if the octopus was real?" was one of the questions put to Lodge by the company's attorney. "Anywhere from two to fifty a day," was the reply.

"What did you tell them?" Lodge laughed quietly. "I didn't make any direct reply," he answered. "I used to tell them we had followed the Jules Verne version exactly."

Lodge intimated he didn't have the heart to tell the audience Elizabeth wasn't all that she should be.
